Sunday was hot and humid, not a day for standing in line. A queue of students and parents, though, wound from Sanford Hall into the street. Once inside, a student received his packet of instructions and then was sent to his dorm. Students moved into the dorms, bringing with them the paraphernalia needed to transform each of the carbon-copy rooms into the extension of an individual personality. Finally the day ended, parents leaving their sons and daughters to face the newness of college life and Monday morning.

Registration — an indescribable collage of sights and sounds, its disorderly scheme a survival test. Classes could never be this bad.

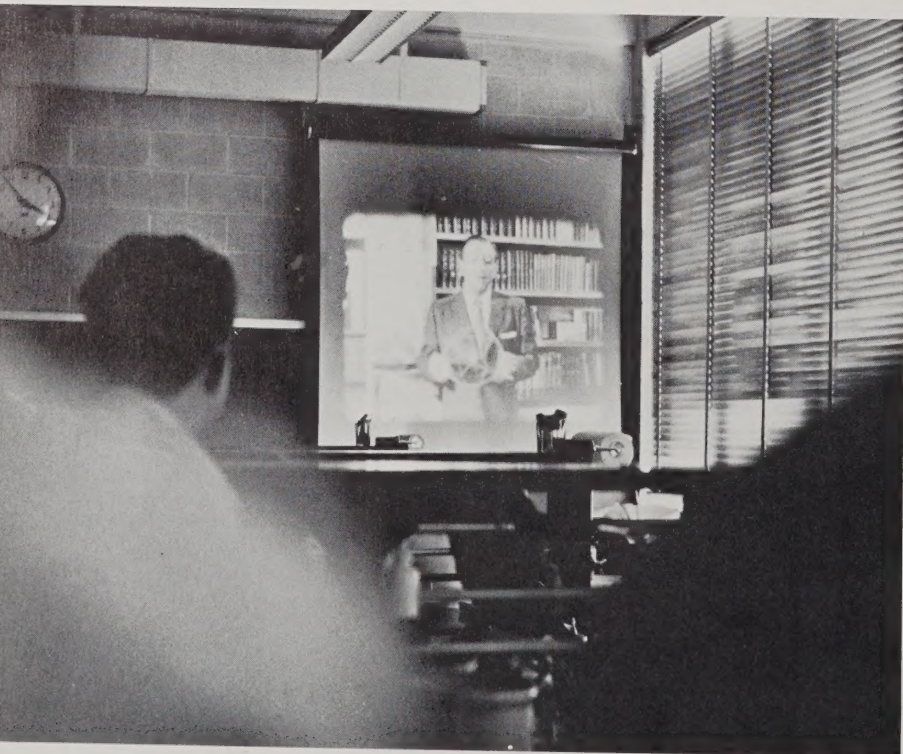

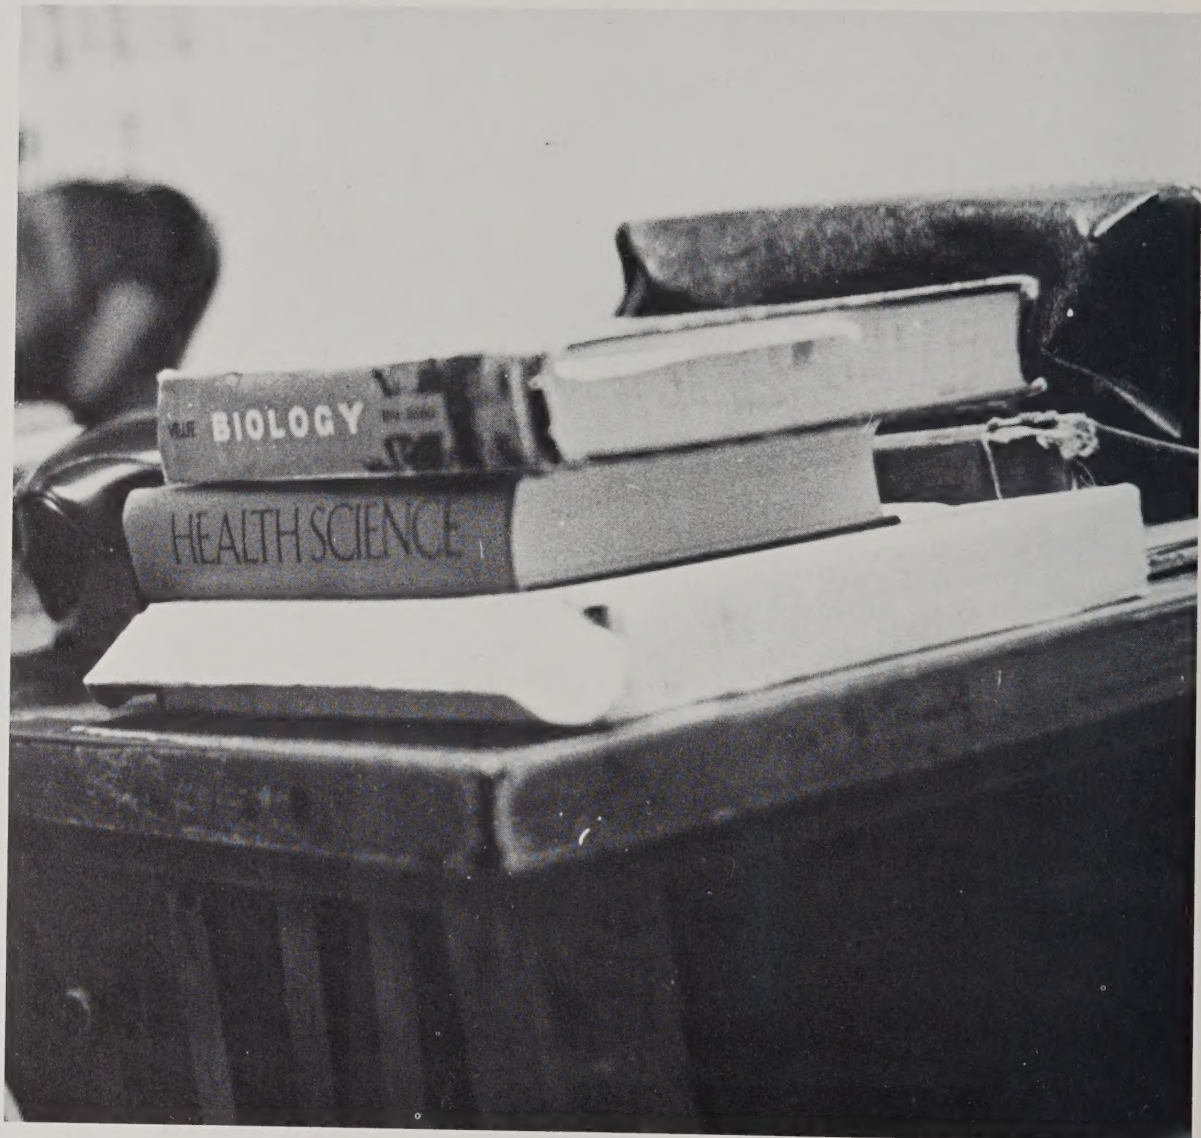

At first there was introspection. Soon, however, other people came into focus, making the college a miniature world which offered a sample of all types and sizes. One became aware of lifestyles different from his own, recognizing not only difference, but the value of variations. Suddenly, very little seemed absolute and questions simply bred more questions. In the middle of the confusion, though, one found assurance and the courage to be an individual — this time not alone, but in the company of others.

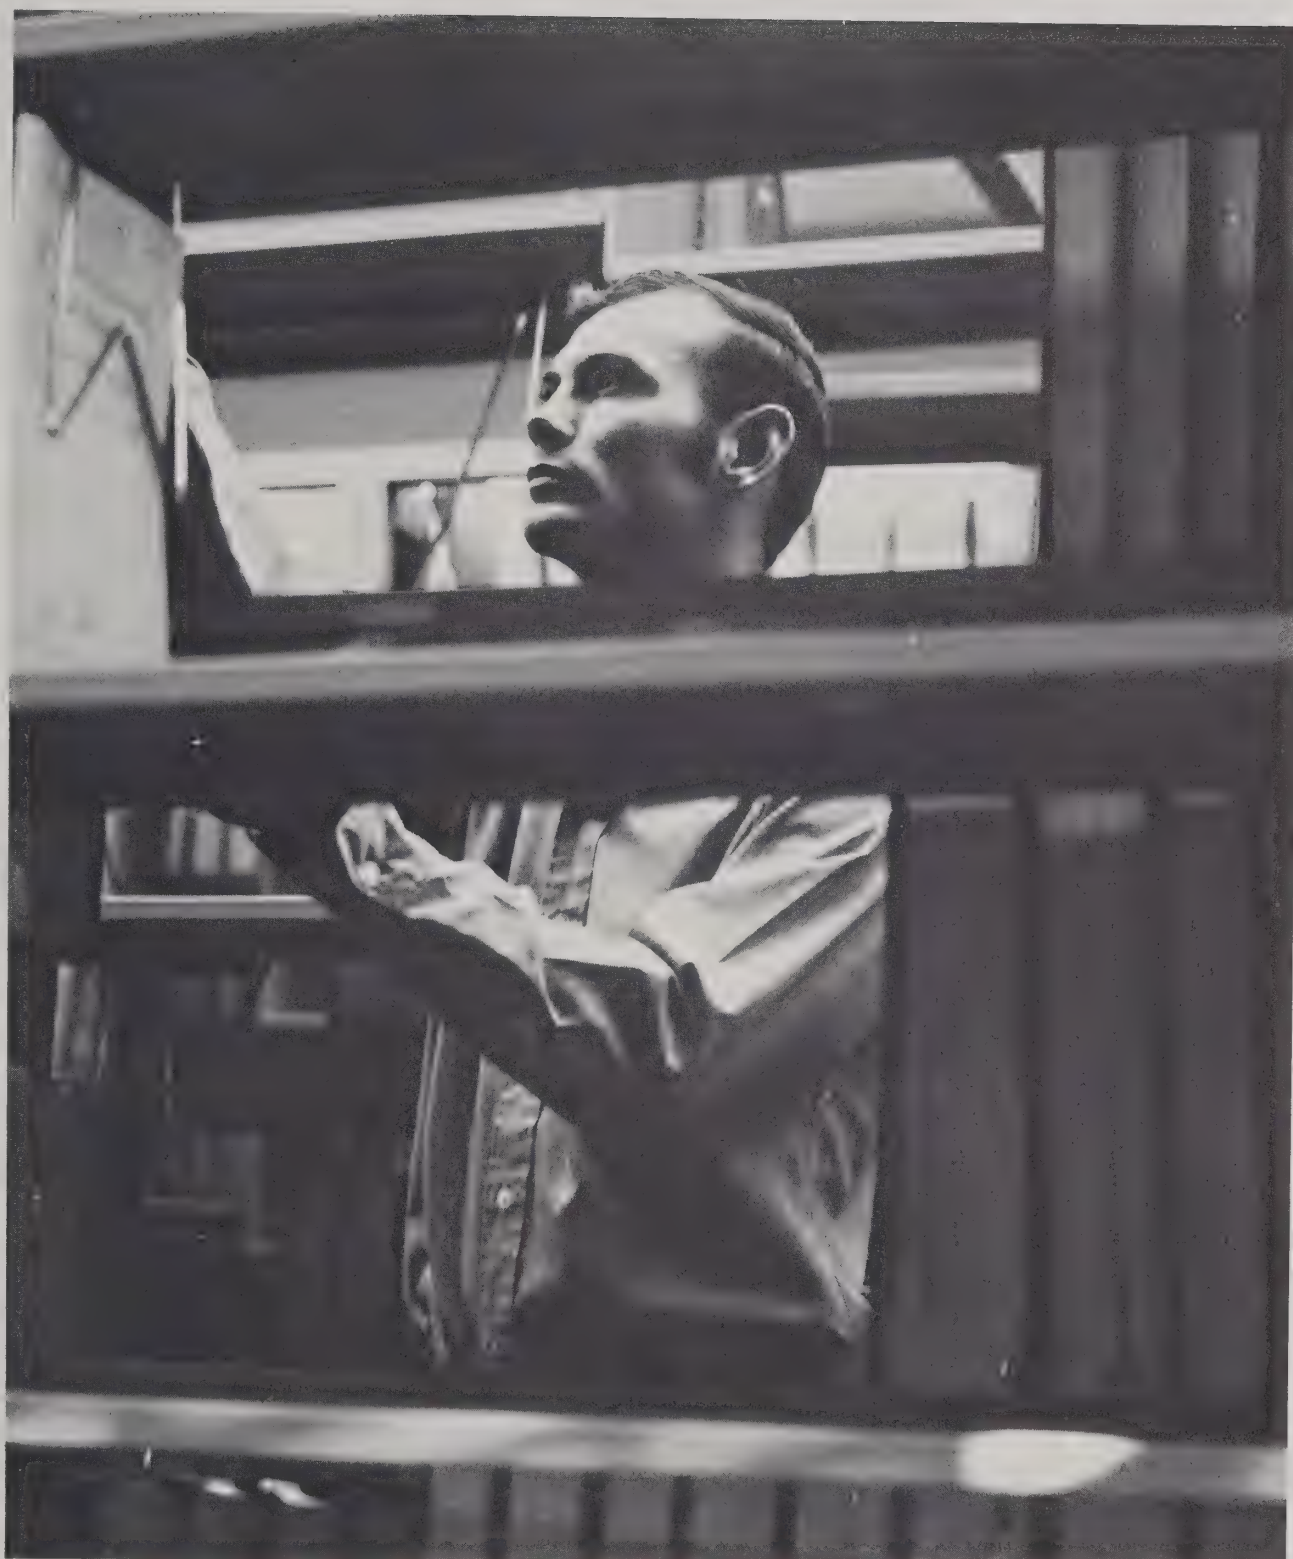

The classroom was only the surface of learning. There the process was initiated; ideas and facts were offered. Students, however, found that only outside research could develop and complete the pattern. Many thought learning to be a slow and painful process; for others, it was merely a challenge to be met. Whatever his methods, each student soon formed a routine of study.

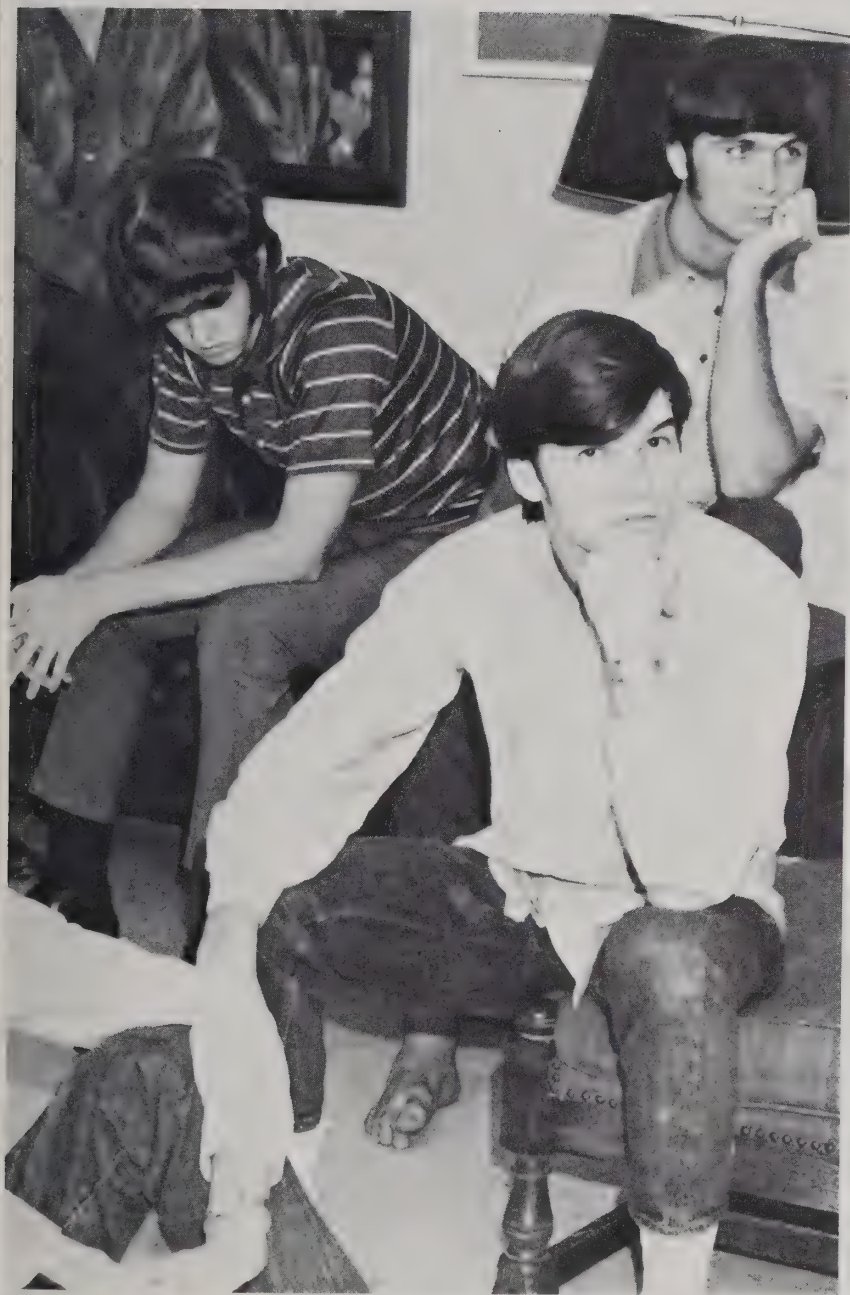

"Out of the welter of life, a few people are selected for us by the accident of temporary confinement in the same circle. We never would have chosen these neighbors; life chose them for us. But thrown together on this island of living, we stretch to understand each other and are invigorated by the stretching."

— Anne Morrow Lindbergh

All alike, yet each unique, students found individual expression through organization. With many diversified interests on campus, there was a need for coordination. The administration and students worked together through the Student Government Association to organize activities. The Student Activities Committee also helped plan school events. Students serving on this committee were nominated on the basis of their interest in school entertainment.

The Student Government Association was composed of forty-five members at large plus representatives of each of the dormitories. Serving as a link between the students and the Administration, this organization, through its executive branch, presented ideas to the President. Dorm life was regulated by the Judiciary Councils, acting under the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women.

One of the largest organizations on campus, the Warriors Club elected Squaws and a Warrior to assist the Cheerleaders at basketball games and bonfires. Its purpose to promote school spirit, the club sponsored many activities with this spirit in mind, such as helping the Student Activities Committee in planning for Homecoming.

Preparation for Homecoming 1971 began several weeks prior to the event. The theme for the occasion was "War Party"; with this in mind, the students decorated the dorms and built floats for the annual parade. The Middle Georgia Warriors defeated the Norman Park Bears in an exciting game Friday night. A dance held in Morris Memorial Gymnasium Saturday evening featured the Men of Distinction.

Homecoming was the product of the combined efforts of all campus organizations. Not only enjoyable, the event gave many students an opportunity to participate in campus life and provided a stimulus for further service to the school.

Service organizations, such as Presidents Club, Civitan, and Rotaract, served to develop leadership and responsible citizenship. The Presidents Club coordinated the work of all campus organizations. This club, along with the Civitan and the Student Government Association, sponsored the Bloodmobile.

Religious life on campus was fostered by the various denominational organizations: Baptist Student Union, Canterbury Club, Newman Club, Wesley Foundation, and Westminster Fellowship. Students sponsored fundraising activities and participated in volunteer work in the community in an effort to contribute to the spiritual growth of themselves and others. During fall quarter, Religious Emphasis Week was opened with a convocation in Morris Gymnasium.

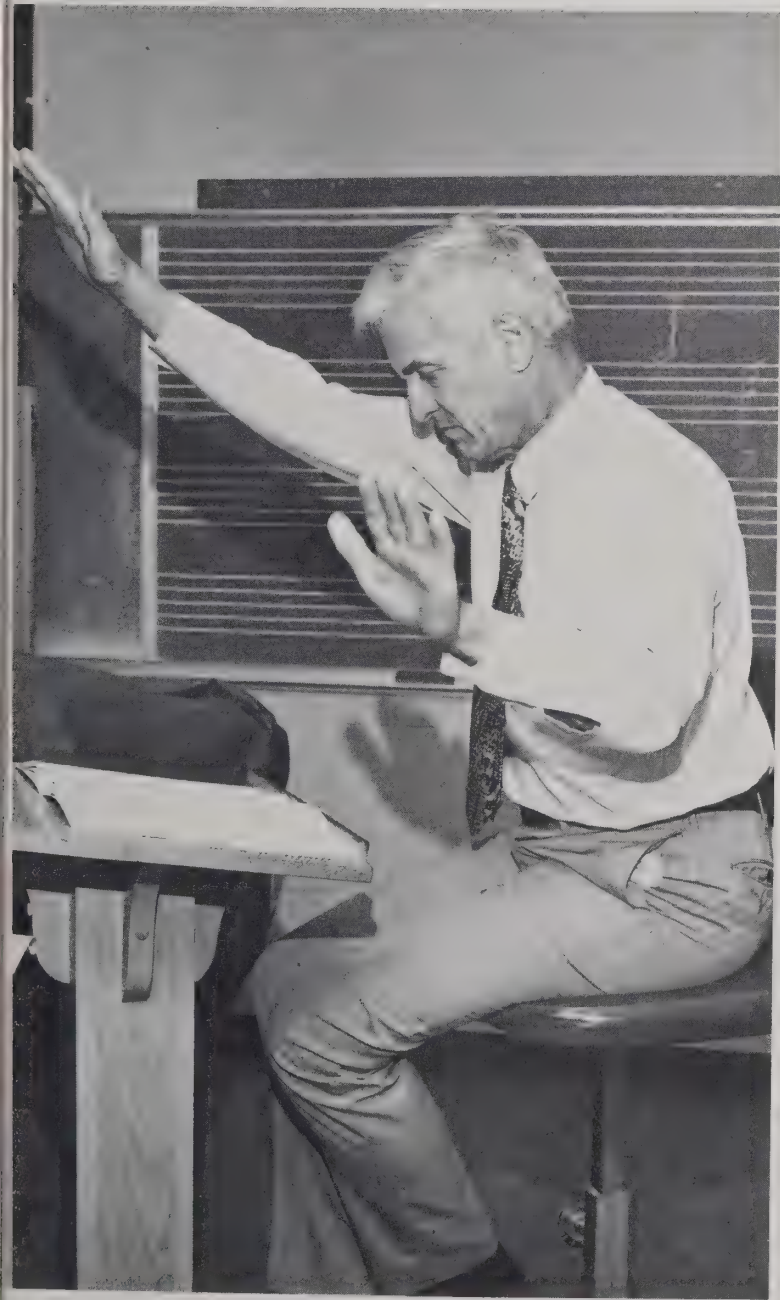

Music in some form was an integral part of the daily life of each student. For those desiring to further develop musical talents, the Choir, Ensemble, and Stageband offered instruction in music theory and practical application of these theories through actual performance. Rendering musical numbers for various college functions, these groups contributed to the cultural education of each student on campus.

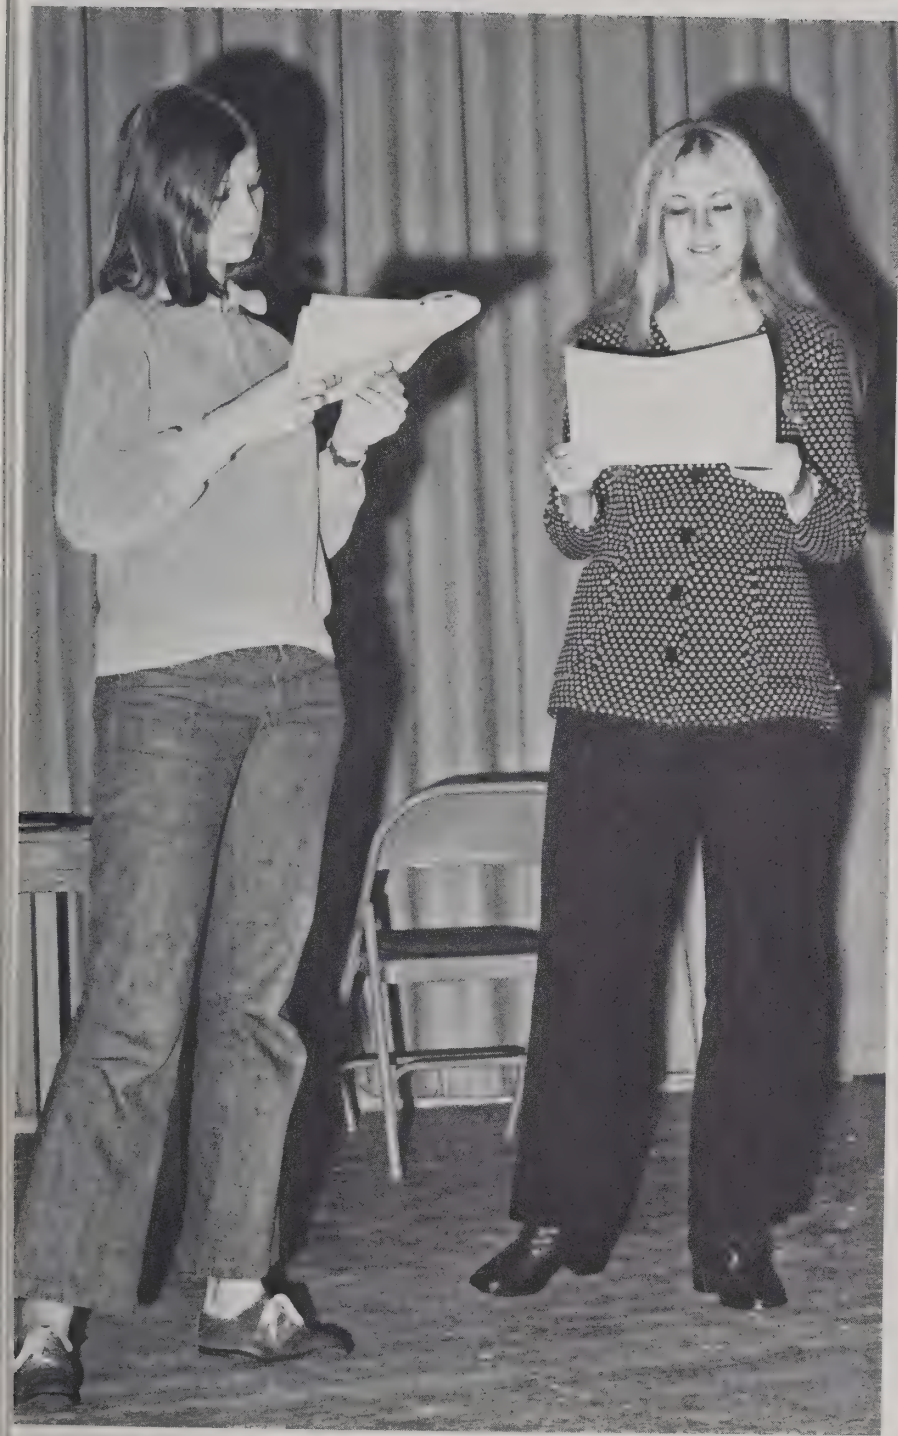

The various special interest groups on campus permitted students to gain practical experience in their field of study. Those interested in Home Economics, for instance, joined Quintas Stellas. Business majors worked in Phi Beta Lambda. Science-related fields were represented by Kappa Epsilon Sigma (the Math and Science Club) and the Engineering Club. Other organizations included SNEA for those interested in education, International Relations Club which helped broaden the understanding between foreign students, and Midga Players (the drama club).

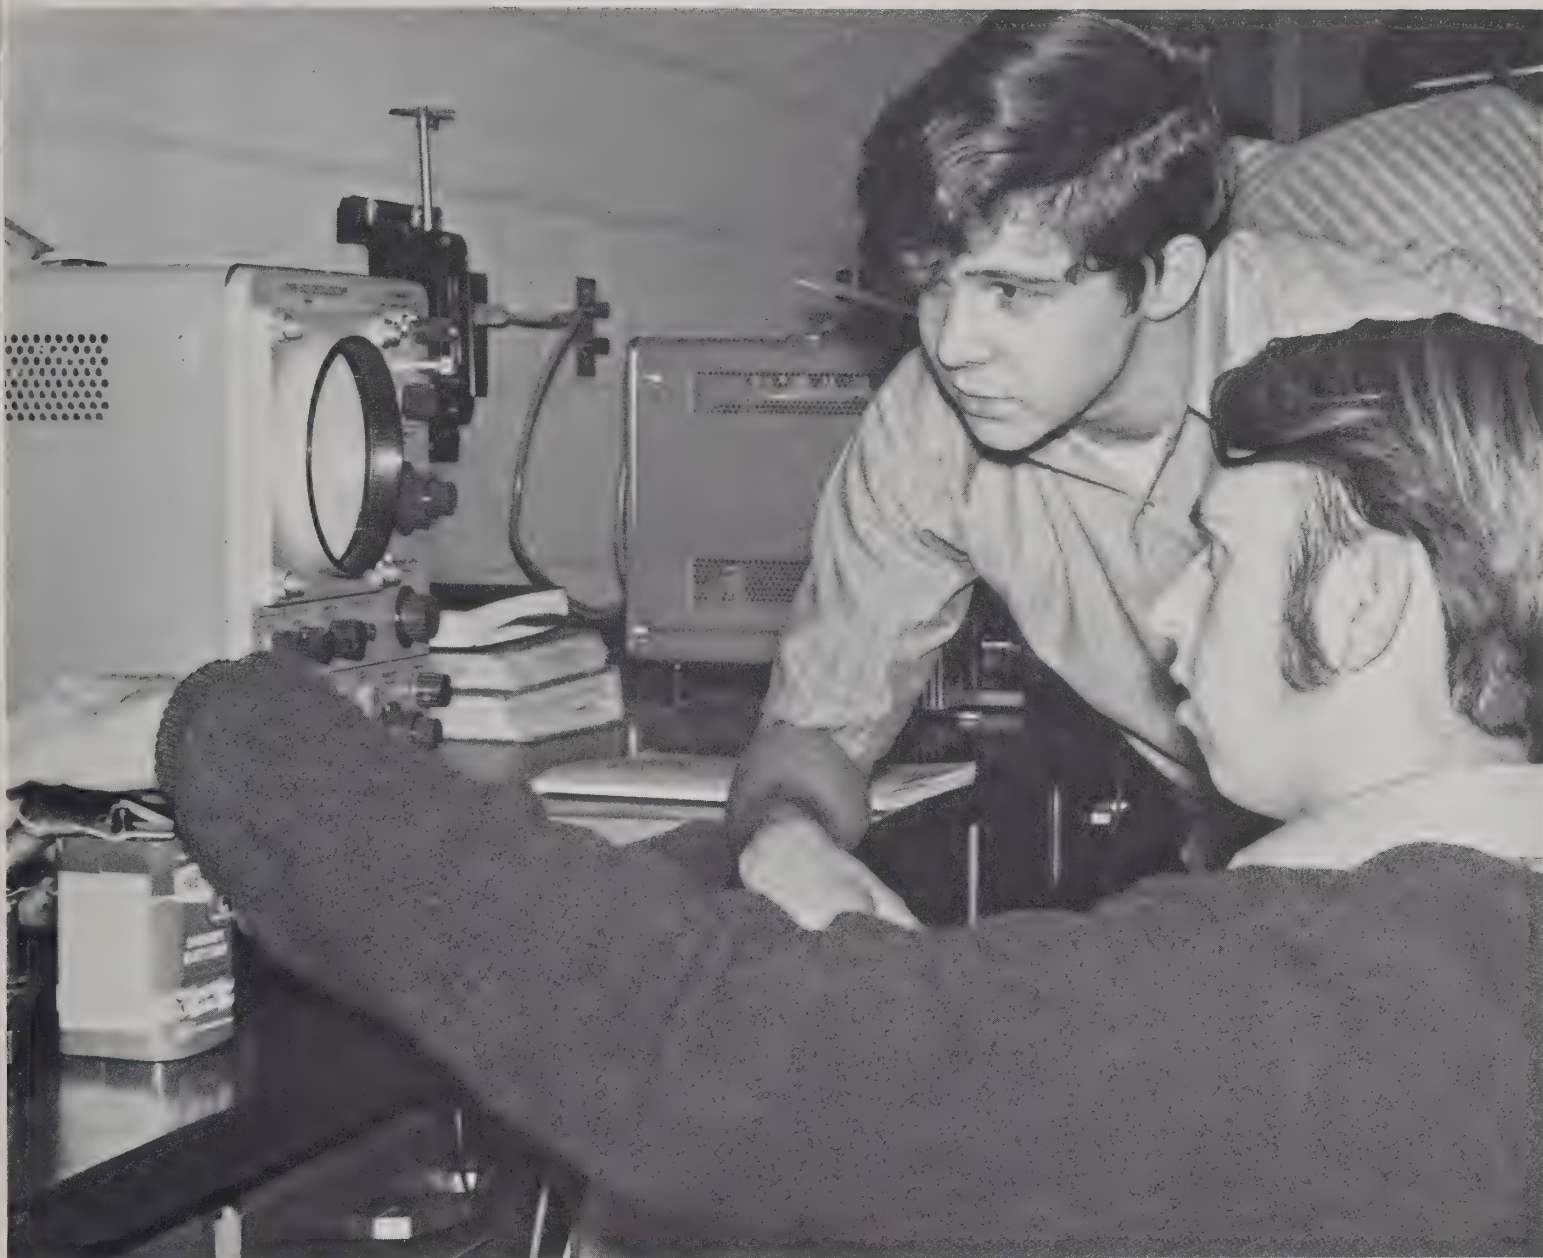

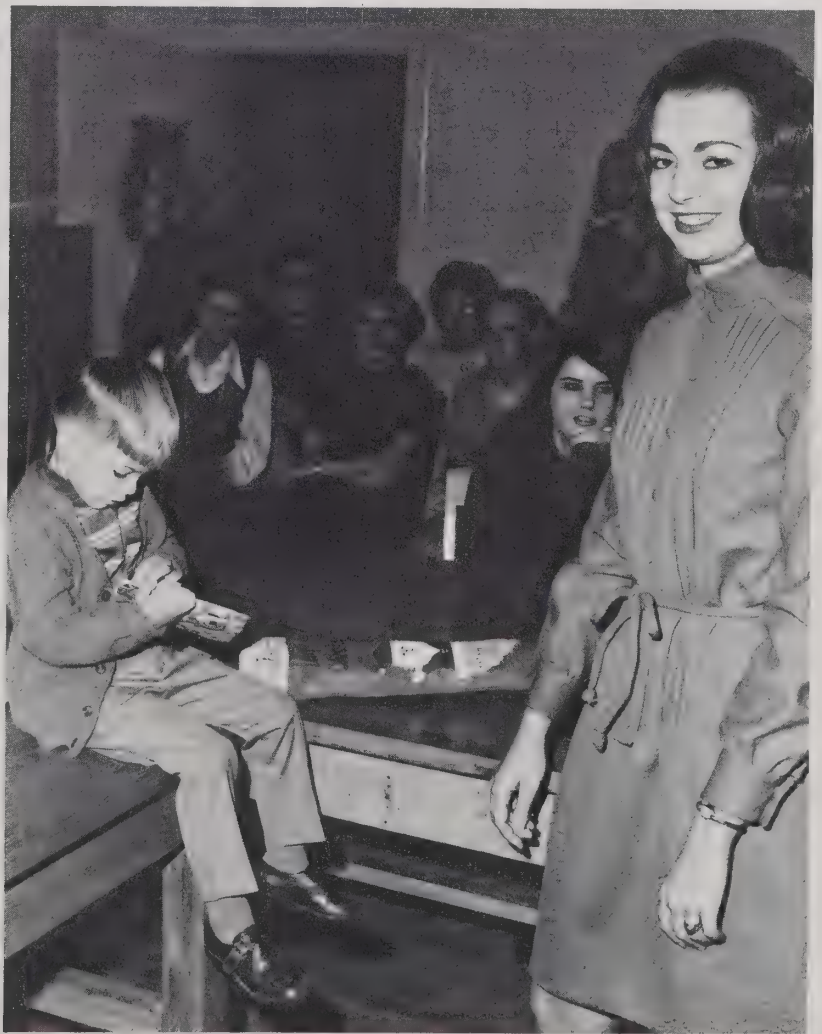

Student publications not only gave valuable experience in journalism but also offered a tangible means of capturing the year's events. The school newspaper, The Kernel, was published monthly. Muses, the literary magazine, was composed of student contributions of poetry, prose, and art.

The planning and production of a yearbook were tedious and time-consuming jobs. The overall plan of the book must be decided upon; then each section must be designed to harmonize with the other divisions. Taking pictures, drawing layouts, cropping pictures, and fitting copy are but a few of the tasks that turned the staff's conception of the year into a black-and white reality — the 1971 Hilltopper.

Recognition for achievement was encouraged by honor societies on campus. High-school Beta Club or National Honor Society members were invited to join Gamma Beta Phi. Students who made Dean's List and maintained a consistently high scholastic average were initiated into Phi Theta Kappa. Beta Phi Gamma honored those who contributed to the various campus publications.

Finally there was time to examine the over-all perspective, instead of being limited to a few personal segments of college life. The campus offered a panorama of ideas, personalities, and cultures. Watching as people walked to class, listening to snatches of conversations in the hallway, sharing odd moments — one learned more by observing.

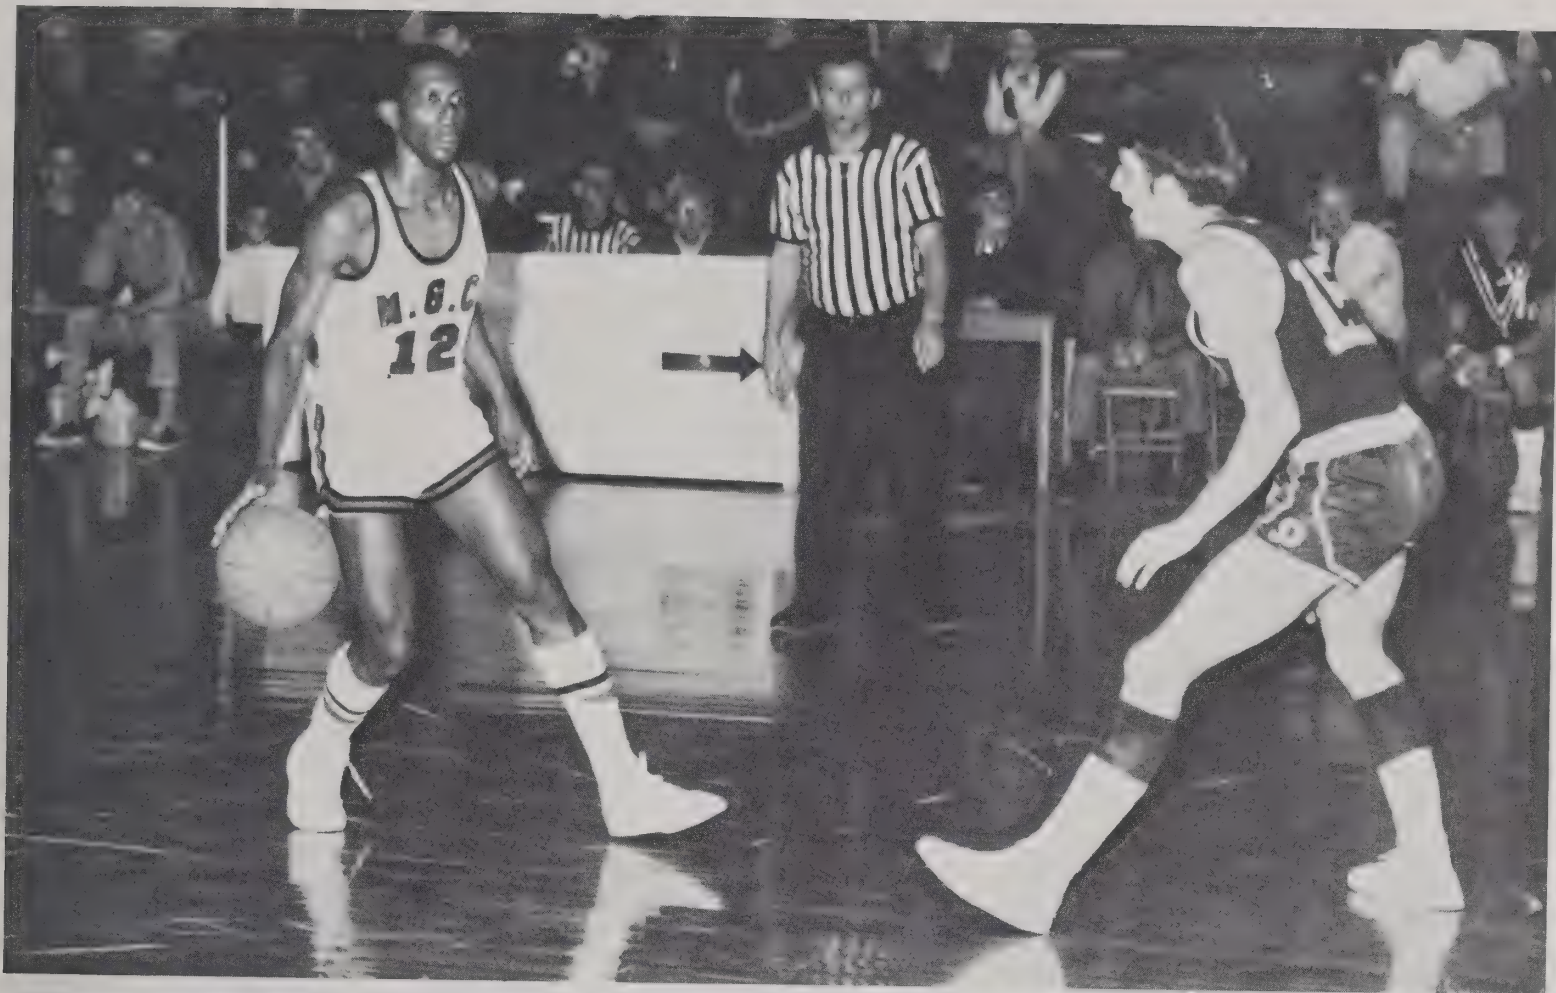

Life in the residence halls demanded understanding and a willingness to share, to listen, to respect the rights of others, and, while doing this, to retain one's personal identity. Midnight hall meetings, for example, called for determination in order to sit cheerfully while being reprimanded; and a phone call usually sent a hall into uproar. In the dormitory, however, personal relationships deepened and friendships more unselfish than most had known before were formed.

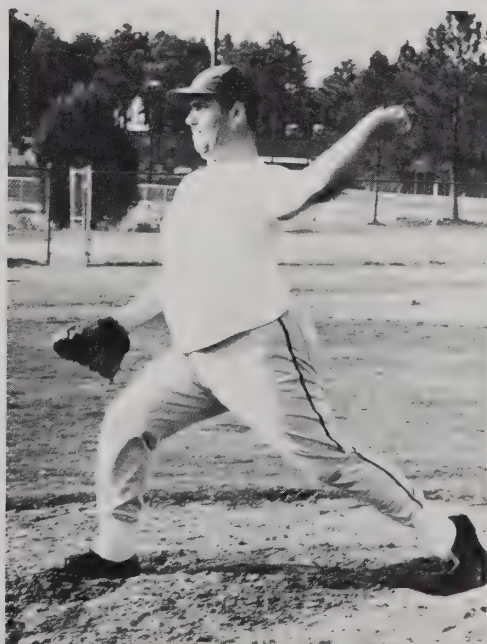

Both physical and emotional maturity were advanced by participation in the wide range of intercollegiate and intramural sports offered. Basketball, football, tennis, baseball, golf — almost all of the major sports were represented.

Last-minute cramming for tests, group projects, weekend dances, personal relationships, individual development — all a part of a college education.

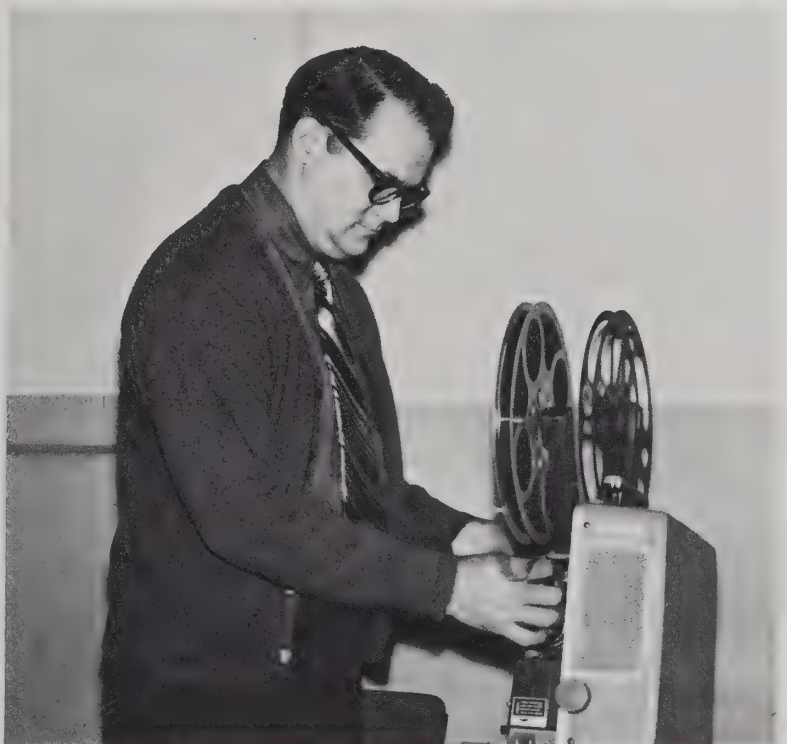

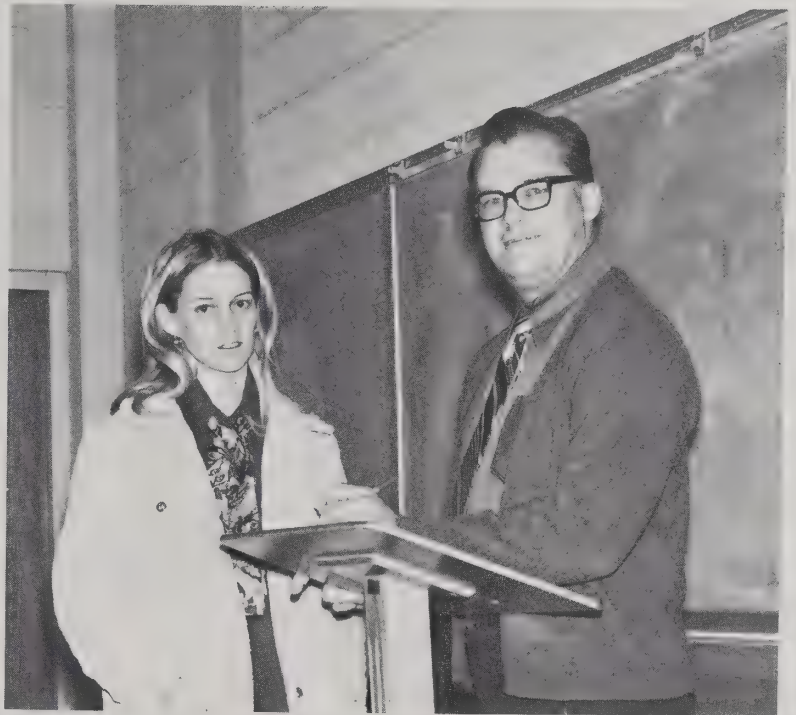

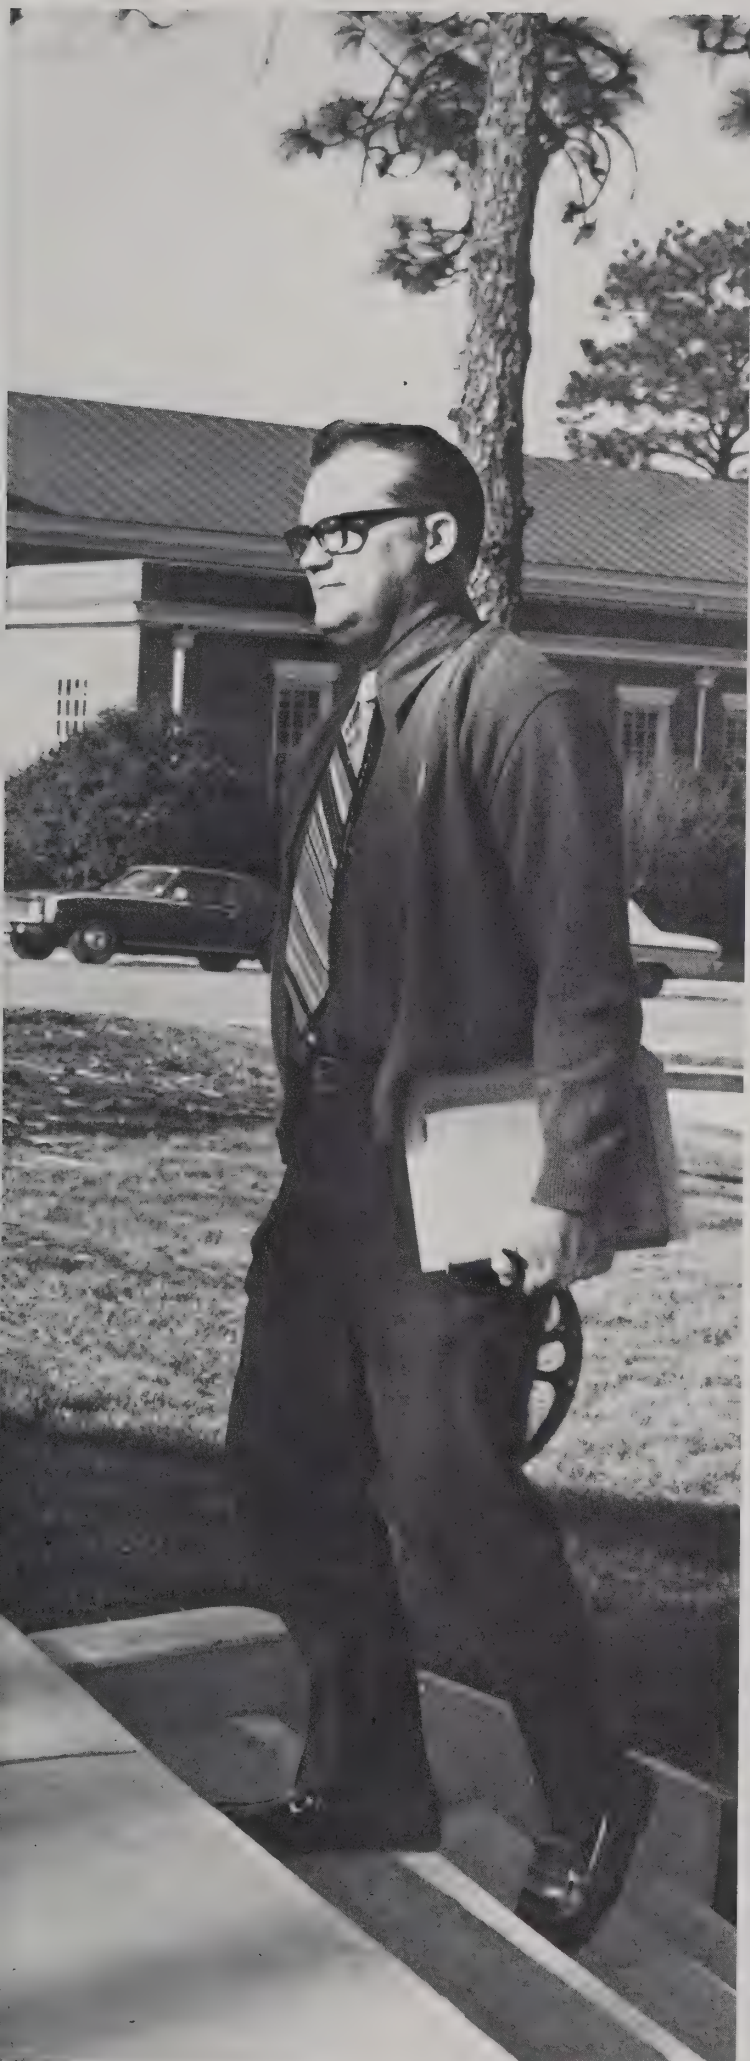

Mr. E. Bowman Barr

Dedication

Students recognize and gratefully acknowledge the value of competent instructors. Rising above the confusion of conflicting theories and methods of education, the outstanding educator grounds his instruction in three basic concepts. First, his knowledge of subject matter is thorough and up-to-date. Second, he effectively communicates the material to each student and makes it relevant to the daily lives of all. Third, he is always eager and willing to advise and give extra help to those who need it. Deserving praise and appreciation, Mr. Edgar Bowman Barr is one of these instructors.

Organized at Middle Georgia College in the spring of 1968, the Collegiate Civitan Club is a co-educational service organization. Its purpose is to build citizenship and to render service to the campus community, much like its parent Civitan International. Membership is by invitation.

The Civitan members spread Christmas cheer by decorating the co-op and preparing Christmas baskets for distribution.

Rotaract Club

Formed in January, 1969, the Middle Georgia College Rotaract Club was the first such club in Georgia and the seventeenth in the United States. Sponsored by Rotary International, Rotaract seeks to stimulate acceptance of high ethical standards, to develop leadership through service to the community, and to promote international understanding and peace.

This year Rotaract sponsored a dance at the beginning of fall quarter to raise money for its various projects. Adoption of a foreign child was one of its major projects.

President

Dr. Louis C. Alderman

Dr. Louis C. Alderman, President of Middle Georgia College, is not only an outstanding educator, but also a leader in his church and community. He has been President of the Georgia Association of Junior Colleges and is a member of the Executive Committee of the Association. In addition, he is co-chairman of the Board of Deacons and Men's Bible Class teacher of the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Alderman received the Outstanding Community Leader recognition in 1969 and 1971 and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Bleckley County Hospital. He received Rotary Club's Service Award in 1969 for organizing the first Rotaract Club in Georgia at Middle Georgia College.

The President is listed in numerous editions of Who's Who, including Leaders in Education, Dictionary of International Biography, and Who's Who in American College and University Administration.

This year a five-million-dollar building program was completed under Dr. Alderman's direction. However, these physical advances are in essence a reflection of progress in the academics of the college. In the past ten years, MGC has increased its number of curriculum programs from 26 to more than 40. The faculty, composed of 24 members ten years ago, now has 110 members, 19 of whom hold doctorates.

Developmental programs, career programs, and advanced courses in many fields of study have been added to the curriculum. The evening class program, serving numerous students in the surrounding area, has expanded in enrollment and curriculum.

Dr. Alderman is constantly seeking new and effective ways to implement programs and courses designed to meet the needs of all students at Middle Georgia College.

Academic Dean

Dr. Joseph P. Vidosic

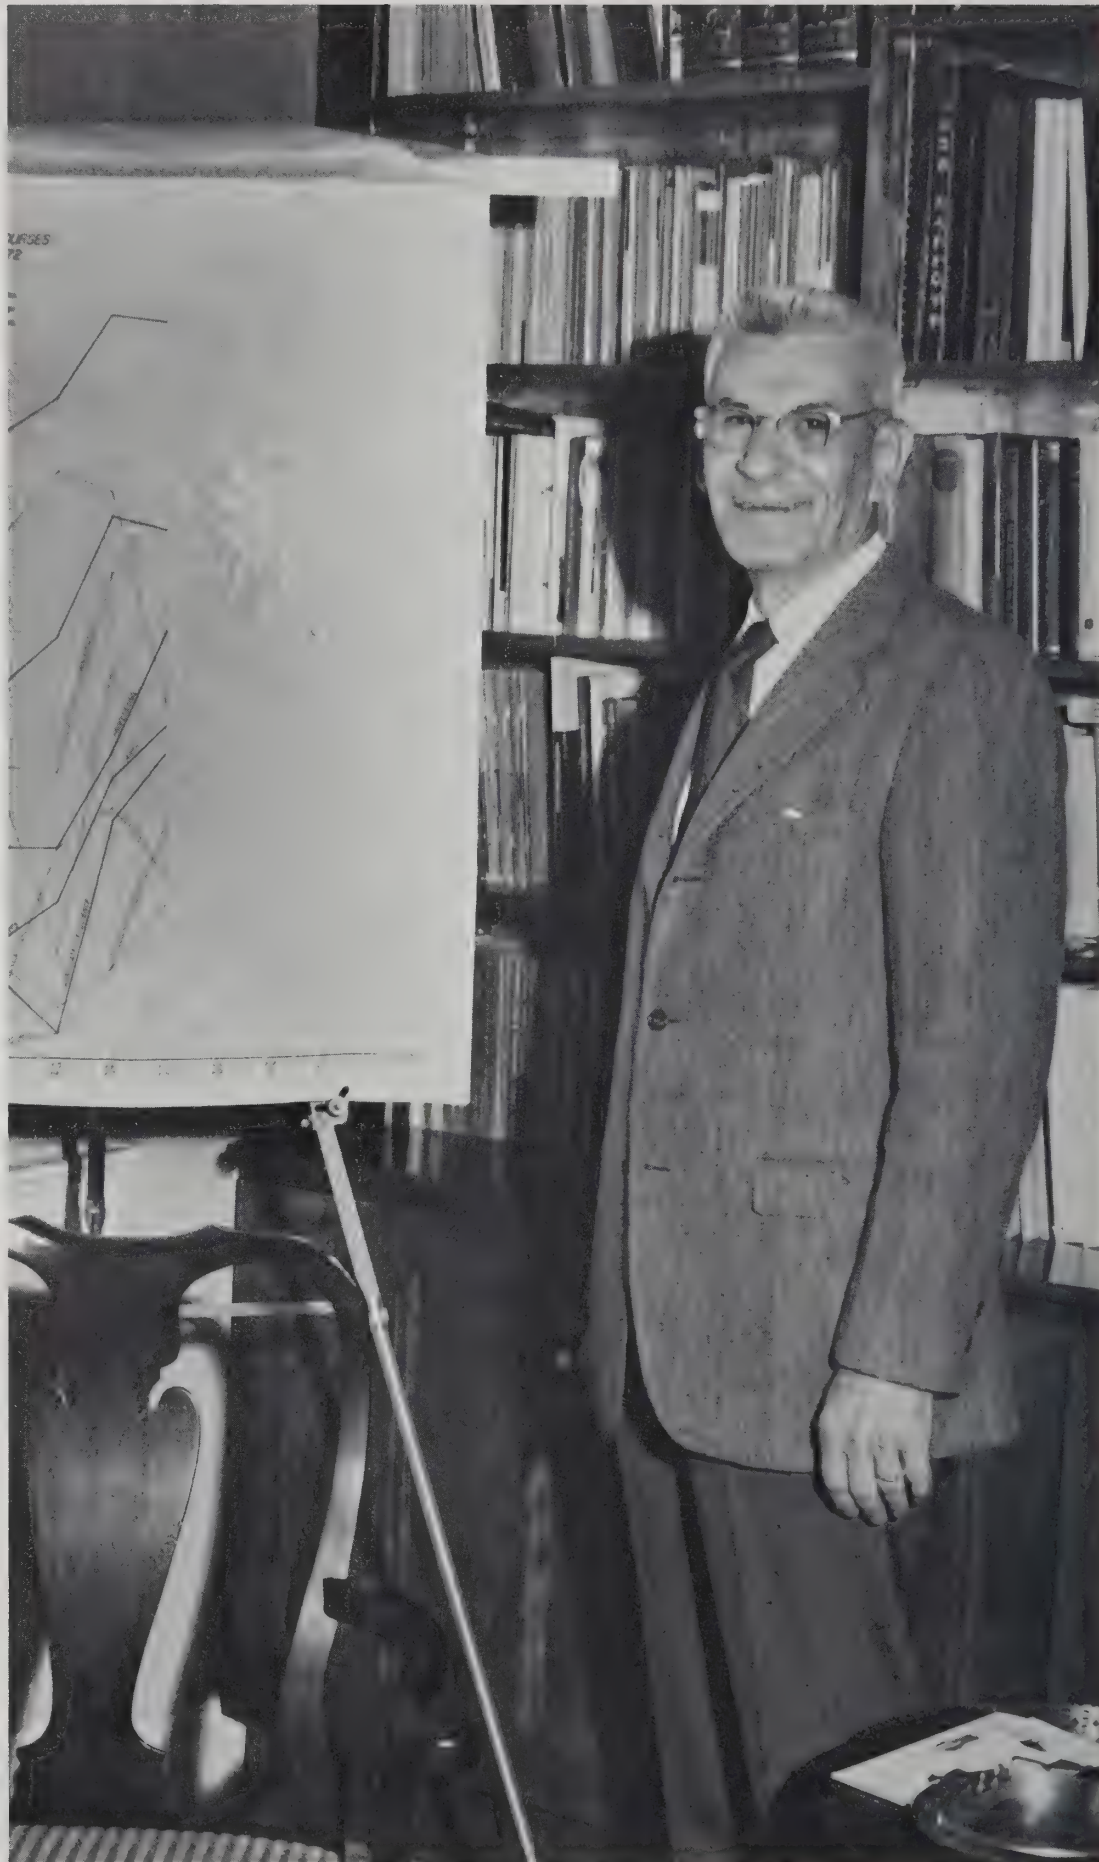

This year Middle Georgia College's distinguished Dean of Administration, Dr. Joseph P. Vidosic, received numerous awards and recognitions. He was awarded a certificate citation for the "initiation and development" of the Engineering Merit Badge for the Boy Scouts of America by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at its annual meeting in New York.

Also, his name was added to four more editions of Who's Who: Outstanding Educators of America, Leaders in Education, Community Leaders of America, and Personalities of the South.

Dean Vidosic was instrumental in the acquisition of the IBM 1052 Terminal with which students and faculty communicated with the computer at the University of Georgia. He also initiated and taught a course in Engineering Statistics.

Always interested in world affairs, Dean Vidosic spoke to various groups and wrote about ecology and pollution of the total environment, its ill effects, and control.

He also continued as secretary to the Design Education Committee of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and chaired a technical session at the Design Engineering Conference in Chicago.

Administration

Middle Georgia College continued to grow in enrollment, plant facilities, and academics this year under the capable leadership of President Louis C. Alderman. The new, spacious women's residence hall, New Dorm East, was occupied this fall. Other buildings completed during the year were a men's residence hall, the College Union building, the Health Services building, and the Fine Arts building.

But buildings can be cold and meaningless, particularly educationally, unless sound, human, relevant, and exciting events advance therefrom. Courses and curricula continued to expand at Middle Georgia this year. Intellectual curiosity and creative thinking continued to be emphasized in and out of the classroom. The addition of a computer terminal and new data-processing equipment greatly enhanced the teaching-learning capabilities. Constructive counseling was always available to students when needed. Social activities as well as sports, most helpful in the complete development of both men and women, were provided at the maximum possible level.

Biological Science Division

Life-size models, audio-visual aids, charts, and pictures are essential for effective study of biology. Thus the Biological Sciences Division concentrated on enlarging its collection of these items this year.

Equipment additions this year included three autoloader film projectors, three overhead projectors, one mounted adult Sus Domestica skeleton, and one human female skeleton with the muscle origins and insertions painted on the bones. Numerous botanical and zoological charts were purchased and mounted for instructional display in each room.

In addition, display cabinets were added to several rooms for students to study specimens and models. These made an excellent attraction and gave the rooms a biological setting. Students were often seen puzzling over and examining models after classes were over.

Business Administration Division

Few vocational fields offer the variety of career choices that business does. Practically every industry, business organization, or governmental agency requires the services of persons trained in Business Administration or Secretarial Science.

Accounting — only one of the many specializations which the Business Administration students may choose — is now the second largest professional area in the United States. More than 750,000 women are now employed in this country in jobs that require skills which fall within the general category of Secretarial Science.

In selecting a career and matching one's own abilities with job requirements, the student has several programs to choose from at Middle Georgia College. In addition to Business Administration and Accounting, Data Processing is another example of a field for which the demand exceeds the supply and for which the student may train at M.G.C. The Secretarial Science programs were expanded this academic year to include Legal and Medical Secretarial Programs.

Division Of Education

Within the past two years, three changes have taken place in the program of the Division which have enlarged its scope. First, students may now receive instruction in four different physical activities during their stay at Middle Georgia College. Secondly, students who have physical disabilities which will not permit them to participate in the regular activities are given instruction commensurate with their individual disability. Third, a developmental reading program has been designed for students with reading difficulties. The course offers a student an opportunity to increase his reading comprehension, vocabulary, and reading speed through programmed materials and lab work.

Humanities Division

This year the new Fine Arts Building neared completion. This building accommodates the arts, music, language, and drama departments. Facilities for print making, photography, and ceramics, as well as quarters for painting and drawing, are provided for art students in this new edifice. The intimate theatre with a seating capacity of 300 will be used for productions by the drama department.

German and a career program in church music were added to the curriculum of the Division this year. English students continued to study literature and composition.

Library Division

In a study completed by the United States Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Roberts Memorial Library compared very favorably with the libraries of other junior colleges. According to the study, MGC's library ranked first among the junior colleges in Georgia in number of volumes. Of the junior colleges in the southeast, only two colleges in North Carolina and three in Florida showed larger collections than Middle Georgia.

This year the library circulated 106,000 items and added 4,894 books, bringing its total holdings to 44,543. Gold carpet, installed this year, not only added to the beauty of the library but also decreased noise, enabling students to study more effectively.

Mathematics And Engineering Division

Middle Georgia College's engineers transfer to various schools. However, Auburn University receives more transfers from MGC than all other out-of-state colleges in the world combined.

This year the college acquired an IBM 1052 computer terminal connected with the University of Georgia computer. Students found their experiences with the computer both fascinating and fruitful.

Physical Science Division

This year chemistry students found the new calculator, fluorometer, osmometer, digital pH meter, and fraction collector particularly valuable in their studies. They used the new atomic absorption unit for the first time, also.

Physics students were fascinated by the new Millikan Oil Drop Apparatus which allowed them to perform experiments like those done by Millikan to determine the charge of the electron. A closed circuit TV camera and a 35mm-reflex camera were used in physics classes as valuable teaching aids.

Social Science Division

The Social Science Division at MGC was a channel through which students studied past and present civilizations and the forces which have molded them. Comparisons and contrasts between ideas, thoughts, and theories helped students better appreciate and understand their country and world. Sociology students were particularly interested in probing current problems of social disorder and disorganization. Political Science 101 was such a popular course that plans were initiated for offering an advanced course. Home Economics courses continued to prepare students for senior colleges and careers as homemakers.

The year has ended. Some met its challenges; others resented its probing nature, wanting only to fulfill momentary self-satisfaction. None of our lives are static. We can reject the knowledge offered by a professor or refuse to answer a prodding question. Yet, time is progression, and we are merely blocking preparation for the future and postponing new growth. This year has been a beginning, and its moments, both important and seemingly insignificant ones, have given us new perspective. Capturing these moments is the function of a yearbook, and the staff has worked hard to accomplish this task . . .
